

Supplementary figures and legends

Figure S1. Dehydrocorydaline (DHC) attenuated complete anterior cruciate ligament transection (ACLT)-induced OA progression. More dark blue punctate inflammatory cells existed in the OA tissue, whereas DHC administration inhibited cell invasion of inflammatory cells into the pores of subchondral bone.