

Microbial Risk Assessment of Tidal-Induced Urban Flooding in Can Tho City (Mekong Delta, Vietnam)

Hong Quan Nguyen ^{1,*}, Thi Thao Nguyen Huynh ^{1,2}, Assela Pathirana ² and Peter Van der Steen ²

¹ Center of Water Management and Climate Change (WACC), Viet Nam National University—Ho Chi Minh City (VNU—HCM), Ho Chi Minh City 12345, Vietnam; n.huynh@un-ihe.org

² IHE Delft Institute for Water Education, Delft 2611 AX, The Netherlands; a.pathirana@un-ihe.org (A.P.); p.vandersteen@un-ihe.org (P.V.d.S.)

* Correspondence: hongquanmt@yahoo.com; Tel.: +84-908-275-996

Figure S1: Locations of the 34 households interviewed

(a)

(b)

Figure S2: Ingested flood water while (a) walking in a flooded street; (b) playing on a flooded street.

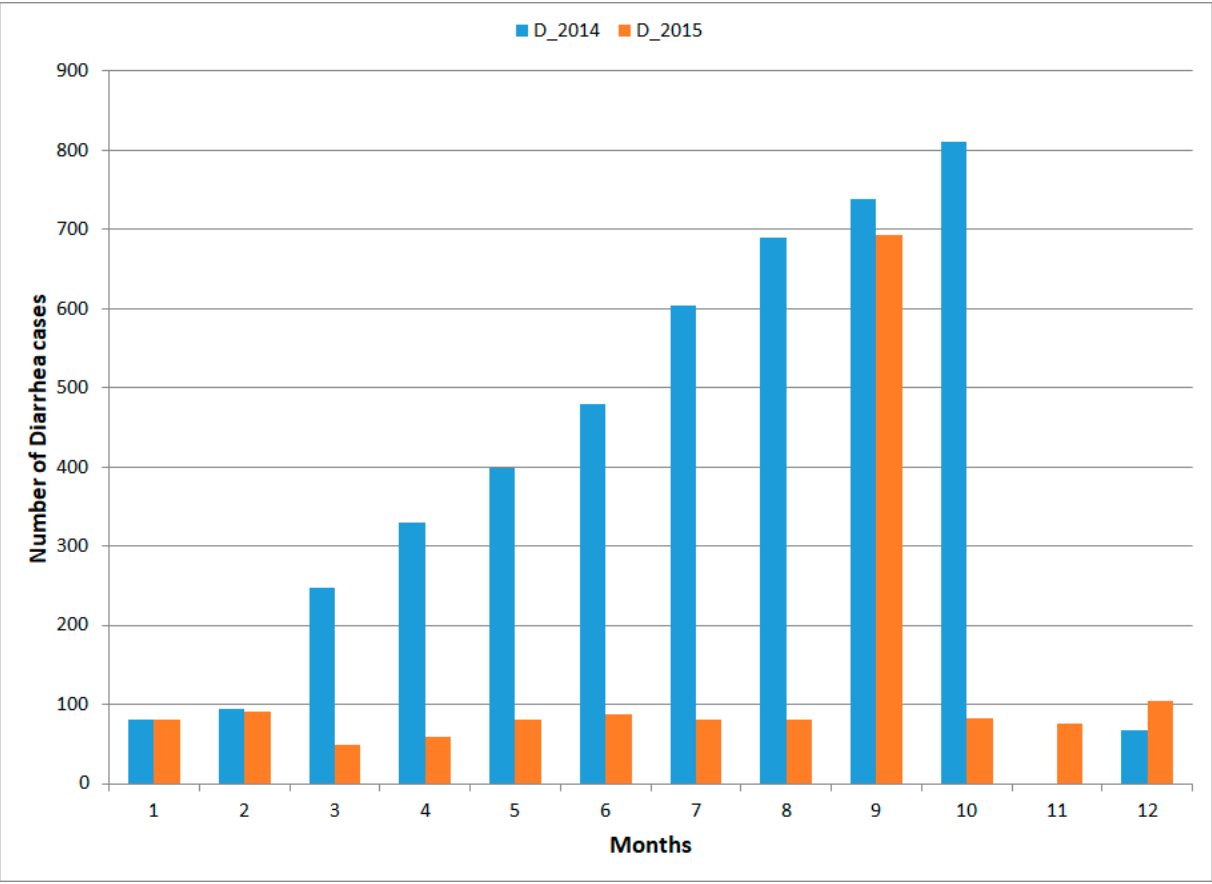

Figure S3: Number of diarrhea cases during 2014, 2015 (Source: Report of Can Tho Preventive Health Care)