

Supporting Information

The Catalytic Hydrogenation of Maleic Anhydride on CeO_{2-δ} Supported Transition Metal Catalysts

Xin Liao^{1,2}, Yin Zhang¹, Junqiu Guo², Lili Zhao¹, Martyn Hill², Zheng Jiang^{1,2*}, Yongxiang Zhao^{1,*}

¹ Engineering Research Center of Ministry of Education for Fine Chemicals, School of Chemistry and Chemical Engineering, Shanxi University, Taiyuan 030006, China; e-mail@e-mail.com

² Faculty of Engineering and the Environment, University of Southampton, Highfield, Southampton, SO17 1BJ, U.K.

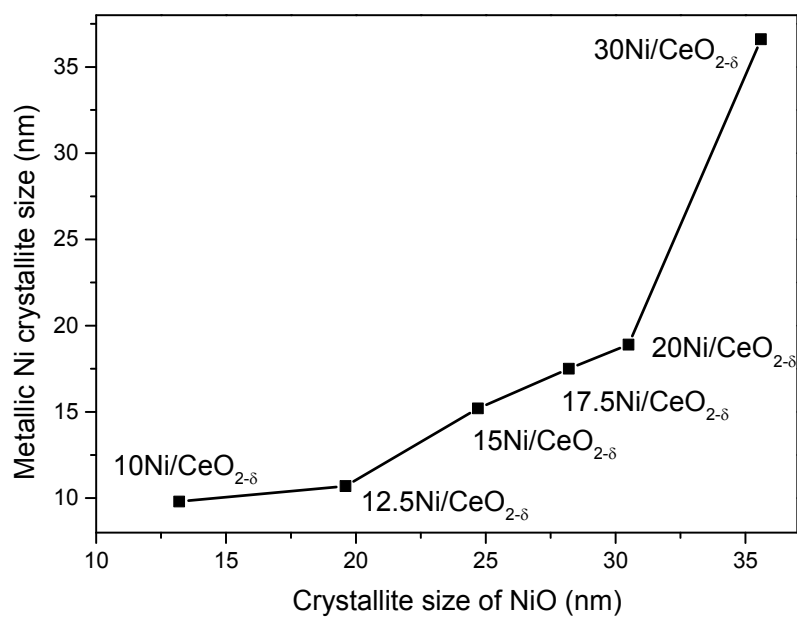

Figure S1. The dependence of metal crystallite sizes on those of metal oxides in the xNi/CeO_{2-δ} catalysts (x represents the loading amount (wt%) of Ni in the xNi/CeO_{2-δ} catalysts).