

Article

Comparison of Bacterial Community in Paddy Soil after Short-Term Application of Pig Manure and the Corresponding Organic Fertilizer

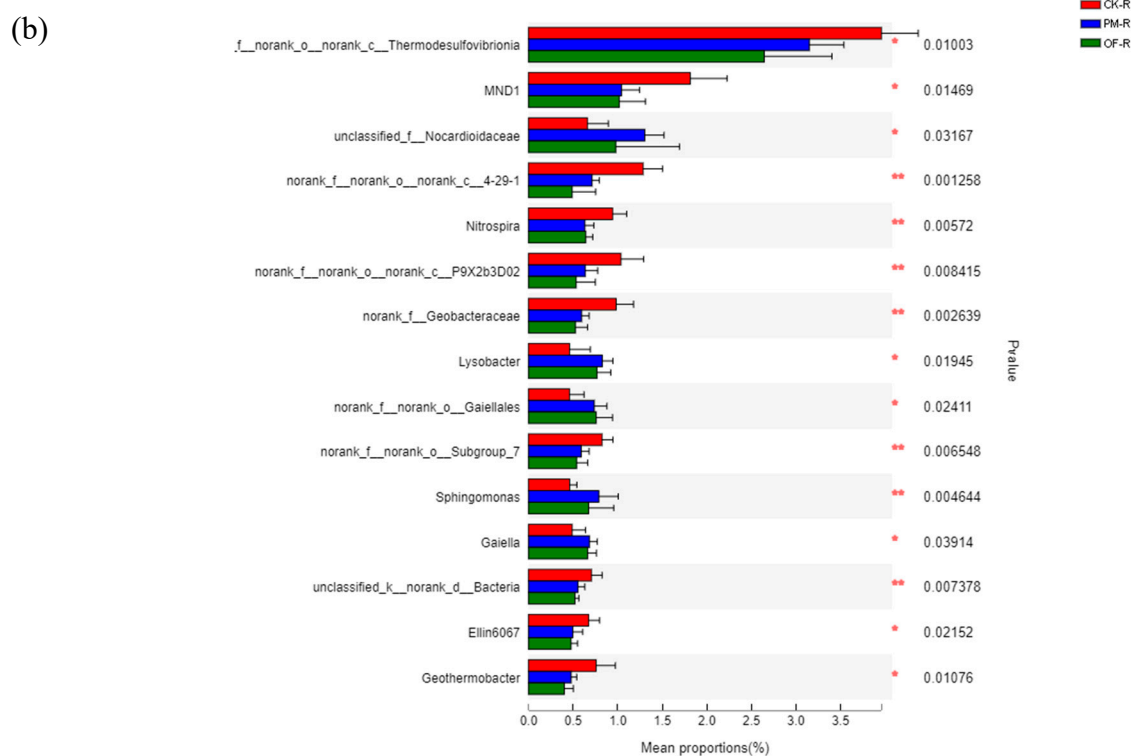

Min Wang <sup>1</sup>, Chenyan Sha <sup>1</sup>, Jianqiang Wu <sup>1</sup>, Peng Li <sup>2</sup>, Juan Tan <sup>1</sup> and Shenfa Huang <sup>1,2,*</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Shanghai Academy of Environmental Sciences, Shanghai 200233, China; wangm@saes.sh.cn (M.W.); shacy@saes.sh.cn (C.S.); wujq@saes.sh.cn (J.W.); tangj@saes.sh.cn (J.T.)

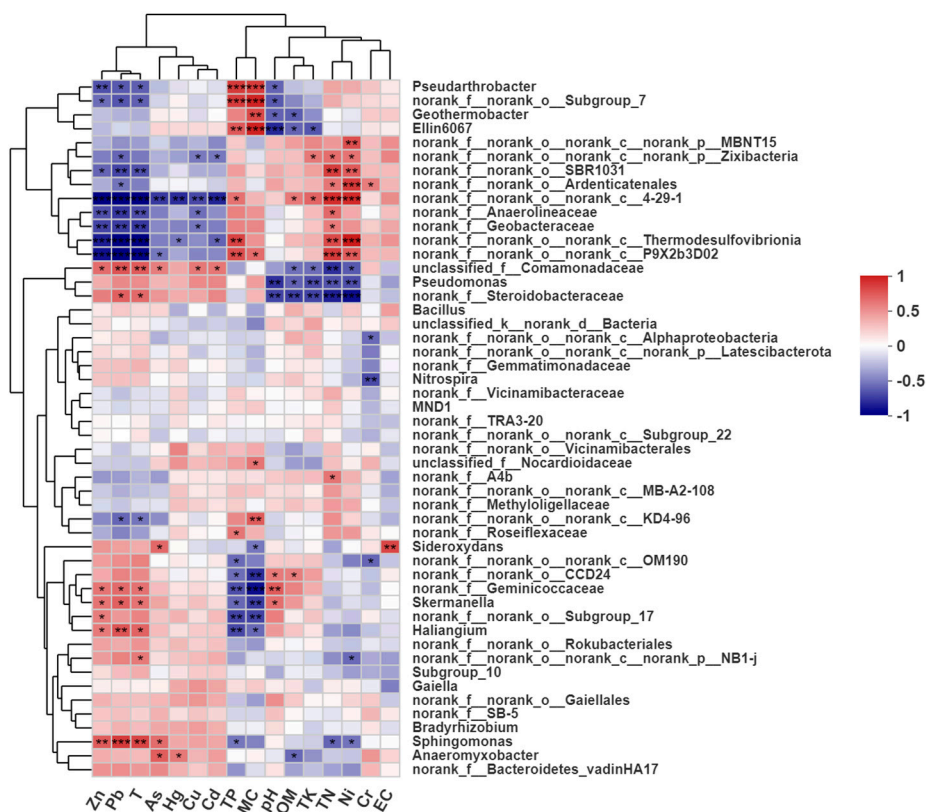

<sup>2</sup> College of Environmental Science and Engineering, Donghua University, Shanghai 201600, China; lipeng951204@163.com

* Correspondence: huangsf@saes.sh.cn; Tel.: +86-640851192321

Figure S1. The comparison of differential bacteria between treatment tests based on the relative abundance at genus level during heading stage (a): tillering stage; (b): ripening stage (CK: control; PM: pig manure; OF: organic fertilizer).

Figure S2. The Spearman correlation analysis of environmental factors and top genus of the control tests.