Women in Food Science

Message from the Guest Editor

Women have contributed extensively for decades to the knowledge of food science, inspiring other women to do the same. This Special Issue aims to acknowledge the powerful impact of women scientists to the fields of agriculture and food and nutrition. Specifically, the aim of this Special Issue is to compile original research and reviews that cover different aspects of food science where women have made a significant contribution. The topics of interest for this Special Issue include but are not limited to the following:

- Development of new food;
- Food analysis;
- Development of technological procedures in the field of food science;
- Improvement of food science procedures;
- Development of food analytical methods;
- Food security;
- The role of food science in human nutrition;
- Food, health, and environment.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

As the world of science becomes ever more specialized, researchers may lose themselves in the deep forest of the ever increasing number of subfields being created. This open access journal Applied Sciences has been started to link these subfields, so researchers can cut through the forest and see the surrounding, or quite distant fields and subfields to help develop his/her own research even further with the aid of this multi-dimensional network.
