Molecular Mechanisms in Multiple Sclerosis

Message from the Guest Editor

Multiple sclerosis (MS) is an inflammation-based, chronic demyelinating disease of the central nervous system (CNS), with myelin degeneration and axonopathy being the major neuropathological hallmarks. Since the etiology of MS is still unknown and symptoms exhibit high heterogeneity among the individuals diagnosed, there exists a need to establish new biomarkers and to prioritize the development of research in animal models of MS, particularly at the molecular level. I hereby invite authors to submit original research or review articles on the molecular mechanisms underlying the pathogenesis of MS or its experimental models in the context of this Special Issue, entitled “Molecular research in multiple sclerosis”. Every submission will undergo meticulous, delay-free scrutiny, in accordance with the standards of the journal.

Author Benefits

High Visibility:

indexed within Scopus, SCIE (Web of Science), PMC, PubMed, Embase, CAPlus / SciFinder, FSTA, AGRIS, and
other databases.

Rapid Publication:

manuscripts are peer-reviewed and a first decision is provided to authors approximately 16.8 days after submission; acceptance to publication is undertaken in 2.7 days (median values for papers published in this journal in the first half of 2024).

Recognition of Reviewers:

APC discount vouchers, optional signed peer review, and reviewer names are published annually in the journal.
