Diagnosis and Management of Immunological, Allergic and Inflammatory Disorders

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue entitled “Diagnosis and Management of Immunological, Allergic and Inflammatory Disorders” focuses on recent advances in diagnosing and treating dysfunctions of the immune system. These pathologies comprising, among others, autoimmune, immunodeficiency and autoinflammatory syndromes, allergic diseases, and inflammatory disorders represent a considerable burden on individuals and societies alike. In most people, a wide array of immune abnormalities can be found, not necessarily of clinical relevance but still representing real diagnostic challenge. Some of these disorders, however, can be life-threatening and should be diagnosed early to enable effective treatment. Unfortunately, for the time being, proper diagnosis cannot always be achieved easily, and thus, novel approaches to the diagnosis of immune system diseases are warranted. This Special Issue aims to focus on topics dealing with the diagnostic challenges of these disorders and syndromes. Both original research articles and reviews are welcome.
