New Assays in the Diagnosis of Coagulation Protein Disorders

Message from the Guest Editor

This aim of this Special Issue, titled "New Assays in the Diagnosis of Coagulation Protein Disorders," is to focus on the collection and evaluation regarding the utility of more sensitive coagulation assays/methods and of new instruments for the diagnosis of coagulation disorders. Moreover, evaluations of the efficacy and monitoring of replacement therapy through new coagulation assays are welcome. Subsequently, evaluations of these tests as future biomarkers in the diagnosis and therapy of different coagulation protein disorders are encouraged.
