

Special Issue

Energy Markets and Economics

Message from the Guest Editor

The broad topics of interest to the Special Issue include, but are not limited to, the following:

- Do renewable and non-renewable energy consumption lead to differing behavior in economic variables?
- Does one need to consider the different energy mix when explaining the economic implications of energy markets?
- Do energy prices co-move?
- Can energy prices explain the exchange rate movements?
- How persistent are energy shocks, and do they differ depending on different energy mix? How sensitive are other components of economic growth to energy markets?

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Energies is an international, open access journal in energy engineering and research. The journal publishes original papers, review articles, technical notes, and letters. Authors are encouraged to submit manuscripts which bridge the gaps between research, development and implementation. The journal provides a forum for information on research, innovation, and demonstration in the areas of energy conversion and conservation, the optimal use of energy resources, optimization of energy processes, mitigation of environmental pollutants, and sustainable energy systems.
