Recent Advances in Understanding Dispersion of Mercury in the Environment

Message from the Guest Editors

Mercury pollution is notoriously a top environmental priority on a global scale, and much effort has been devoted to understanding its biogeochemical cycle and processes of dispersion in the environment. While the main sources and transport mechanisms are reasonably well established, there are several aspects that await a better definition and understanding. This Special Issue will collect a selection of recent studies that advance our knowledge on the subject. Any novel contribution will be considered, including reviews of specific topics, case studies, and implications for legislation and management.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Environmental issues are quickly becoming central political, economic and academic topics of the twenty-first century. A large number of modern challenges are directly or indirectly caused by complex interactions between environmental issues. Such issues require interdisciplinary research, knowledge and insights to understand and, ultimately, for solutions to be found. Through the journal Environments, we strive to create a platform for meaningful discourse by accepting contributions from a wide range of fields. We sincerely hope you will consider publishing your distinguished work in this highly-accessible, peer-reviewed journal.
