Special Issue

Food Identity, Authenticity and Fraud: The Full Spectrum

Message from the Guest Editors

Issues with food authenticity, surfacing frequently, have led to an increased awareness and interest in the field of food authenticity and fraud. There is a need to understand factors that contribute to the occurrence of food fraud, as well as novel detection technologies and the associated statistical techniques used to detect adulteration in food products. We are currently inviting papers on studies on various aspects of food identity, food authenticity and food fraud for this Special Issue of Foods. This includes the full multidisciplinary spectrum of analytical chemistry, physics, statistics, food quality management, criminology, marketing, consumer sciences, and economic sciences. About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Foods (ISSN 2304-8158) is an open access and peer reviewed scientific journal that publishes original articles, critical reviews, case reports, and short communications on food science. Articles are released monthly online, with unlimited free access. Currently, Foods has been indexed by the Science Citation Index Expanded (SCIE - Web of Science), PubMed, and Scopus. Our aim is to encourage scientists, researchers, and other food professionals to publish their experimental and theoretical results as much detail as possible. We therefore invite you to be one of our authors, and in doing so share your important research findings with the global food science community.
