Clinical Updates in Cardiac Electrophysiology

Message from the Guest Editor

The Journal of Clinical Medicine (a renowned journal with an impact score of 4.1 and a CiteScore of 5.4) is pleased to announce a new Special Issue titled 'Clinical Advancements in Cardiac Electrophysiology.' In recent years, there have been significant developments in the fields of catheter ablation, conduction system pacing, left atrial appendage occlusion, leadless pacing, remote monitoring, artificial intelligence, and digital health. These improvements are expected to have a major impact for patients with heart rhythm disorders and heart failure in the coming years, and thus, dissemination of these findings to a broad readership is crucial. Therefore, this Special Issue invites original research and systematic reviews to provide an update on the clinical progress related to treatment approaches, predictors of outcomes, advanced cardiac imaging including cardiac magnetic resonance, remote monitoring, digital health, and artificial intelligence for heart rhythm disorders.
