

Special Issue

Familial Mediterranean Fever and Other Auto-Inflammatory Diseases: From Genetics to Medical Practice

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue is devoted to highlighting the major advances that arose over the last three decades, to help the reader understand how these were translated into patient benefits, but also from clinical or technological perspectives. We welcome contributions to this issue dealing with both the past (reviews, epidemiological studies, etc.) and future (development of new pharmacogenomic strategies, etc.). We also invite articles focusing on new genetic mechanisms (mosaics, digenism, epigenetics, etc.), co-morbidities (autoinflammation as a consequence of infectious or cancerous disease, etc.), as well as educational (the patient as an actor, puzzling cases resolved, etc.), socio-psychological (quality of life, etc.), or economical issues (factual studies on the impact of recent genetic or therapeutic developments, etc.).

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

There has been an explosion of gene and target based research and therapeutics in the multitude of fields that compose clinical medicine. The Journal of Clinical Medicine's (JCM) staff and editorial board are dedicated to providing cutting edge, timely, and peer-reviewed articles covering the diverse subspecialties of clinical medicine. The journal publishes concise, innovative, and exciting research articles as well as clinically significant articles and reviews that are pertinent to the myriad of disciplines within medicine. The articles published are relevant to both primary care physicians and specialists. The journal's full-texts are archived in PubMed Central and indexed in PubMed. Please consider submitting your manuscripts for publication to our journal and check us out on-line!
