

Special Issue

Interventional Cardiology: Latest Technology, Progress and Challenge

Message from the Guest Editors

[] Aim and scope of the Special Issue: We will publish articles giving an overview of the latest technologies and new procedural techniques in coronary and structural heart interventions. We will focus on the development of new interventional directions in heart failure, as well as electrotherapy. Another key topic will concern right- and left-ventricle support and left-ventricle assist devices.[]

Cutting-edge research: We will explore novel technologies, new procedural and interventional techniques, and possible future directions and challenges for developing interventional methods of heart disease treatment.[*] What kind of papers we are soliciting: Clinical studies, and comprehensive literature reviews discussing development directions for future interventional treatment methods.
