

Special Issue

The Human Rights of Migrants

Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues: We are excited to embark on a Special Issue focused on the human rights of migrants. Our aim is to focus on how a human rights framework could fill gaps to protect migrant groups traditionally or newly left out of the law's protections. These groups include categories of forcibly displaced peoples, such as climate or economic refugees, Indigenous people, internally displaced peoples, or those escaping privatized violence who cannot satisfy narrow definitions of asylum and refugee laws. The focus includes the daily lives of immigrants, both with or without regular status, and their experiences regarding integration in their host country or in their place of origin after voluntary or involuntary repatriation.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Laws is an international, open access journal featuring rigorous scholarship on critical developments in governance, courts, agencies, and social order. Analysis and synthesis, theory and practice, and empirical and doctrinal work have appeared in the journal; contributions that bridge these traditional boundaries are particularly welcome. The social sciences and humanities generate insights both from and for the legal system. While theory grounds Laws in a timeless dialogue shaped by traditions of inquiry, legal practice ensures that scholars are addressing pressing problems. Both normative and positive scholarship can aid policymakers, judges, and agency officials. Laws brings together the work of theorists and practitioners, and a diverse range of empirical researchers, to promote the progress of foundational legal norms.
