Neurorehabilitation of Neurodegenerative Diseases and Brain Damage

Message from the Guest Editors

Neurorehabilitation is a key multidisciplinary effort to recover functions in order to regain independence and increase the quality of life of affected subjects. Given the importance of the neurorehabilitation of neurodegenerative diseases and brain damage in the field of medicine and research, the journal Medicina is launching this Special Issue. We encourage you and your co-workers to submit your articles reporting on this topic. Reviews, project protocols, or original articles dealing with new strategies for cognitive, motor, or sensorial rehabilitation are welcome, as well as articles providing an up-to-date overview of the use of clinical, neurophysiological, or neuroimaging tools for prognostic marker identification or disease characterization. In addition, we warmly invite you to submit articles reporting on evidence and expectations from non-invasive neuromodulation therapies applied to neurorehabilitation, with a special focus on individualized approaches. Especially welcome are articles related to traumatic brain injury, stroke, Parkinson's Disease, and Alzheimer's Disease.
