Nutrition Metabolism with Molecular Immunology

Message from the Guest Editors

I am writing to invite you to contribute to our upcoming Special Issue on "Nutrition Metabolism with Molecular Immunology." As we all know, nutrients are vital for maintaining life, and they play a crucial role in the normal functioning of the immune system. However, there are numerous nutritional products on the market claiming their immunological functions, and explicit contents need to be clarified. The aim of this Special Issue is to demonstrate the molecular mechanism by which nutrients affect the immune system of the host. We seek to highlight the most recent studies on nutrients, including carbohydrates, fatty acids, proteins, vitamins, and minerals, and their regulation of immunity for developing future therapies. We invite interested researchers to submit their original research, reviews, and short reports related to this topic. Our goal is to provide valuable insights into the role of nutrition in immunology and to guide the development of targeted nutritional products for specific populations. Thank you for considering this invitation. We look forward to your contributions. Sincerely,

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Nutrients is an on-line open access journal that was first published in 2009. Nutrients adheres to rigorous peer-review and editorial processes and publishes only high quality manuscripts that address important issues related to the impacts of nutrients on human health. The Impact Factor of Nutrients has risen rapidly since its establishment and it is now ranked in the first quartile of journals publishing in the field of nutrition and dietetics research.
