Nutritional Regulation of Plant Extracts on Human Health

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue, entitled "Nutritional Regulation of Plant Extracts on Human Health," focuses on the impact of plant extracts on human health. Recent references and studies have concluded that the nutritional regulation of plant extracts has a protective role in the development of several human diseases. In addition, it has been reported that the use of antioxidant supplements derived from plant extracts improves the prognosis of some chronic diseases, and their co-administration with some drugs is often synergistic, increasing their therapeutic benefits. Therefore, plant-extract-based nutritional intervention can play a key role in human health.
