

Special Issue

Remote Sensing of Interaction between Human and Natural Ecosystem

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue focuses on the latest research advances in remote sensing technologies and their applications for observing, understanding, modeling, and communicating interaction between humans and natural ecosystems. We will look at new methodological approaches, framework, and indicators towards mapping (1) human activity (i.e., urbanization, urban greening, and ecological engineering) and (2) their impacts on regional ecology, climate, water resources, and social-economic development. Submissions in the form of research articles, reviews, perspectives, and case studies are all welcome.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Remote Sensing is now a prominent international journal of repute in the world of remote sensing and spatial sciences, as a pioneer and pathfinder in open access format. It has highly accomplished global remote sensing scientists on the editorial board and a dedicated team of associate editors. The journal emphasizes quality and novelty and has a rigorous peer-review process. It is now one of the top remote sensing journals with a significant Impact Factor, and a goal to become the best journal in remote sensing in the coming years. I strongly recommend Remote Sensing for your best research publications for a fast dissemination of your research.
