

Special Issue

Sustainable Vegetable Production and Biodiversity within a Climate Change Environment

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue invites original research papers and reviews focusing on the rural and urban farming development through the sustainable vegetable production under the climate change challenges. Special focus will be given to biodiversity-based farming systems, plant adaptation to abiotic stresses, and eco-efficient cropping systems, although other research topics related with vegetable production are also welcomed. The Special Issue aims to contribute to the literature on sustainable cultivation of vegetable crops and foster and reinforce vegetable production with modern tools towards rural and urban development. Topics are related but not limited to:

- Biodiversity
- Farming systems
- Local landraces
- Vegetable production
- Wild edible species
- Climate change
- Quality and safety
- Urban and rural farming

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

I encourage you to contribute a research or comprehensive review article for consideration for publication in Sustainability, an international Open Access journal which provides an advanced forum for research findings in areas related to sustainability and sustainable development. Sustainability publishes original research articles, review articles and communications. I am confident you will find the journal contributes to enhancing understanding of sustainability and fostering initiatives and applications of sustainability-based measures and activities.
