Advances in Sustainable Climate Change Adaptation Research and Technology

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue, entitled “Advances in Sustainable Climate Change Adaptation Research and Technology”, aims to publish original research, research reviews, case studies, and applications of advanced and emerging research and technology, policy, and cross-disciplinary education focused on the sustainable management of water resources/water infrastructure and food security. Specifically, the submission of articles introducing advanced research and technologies, such as data science/machine learning, satellite technologies (remote monitoring and sensor technologies or geospatial analyses), and artificial intelligence, into the sustainable management of water resources and water infrastructure, and discussing the social aspects, economic incentives, and policies for implementing sustainable water management systems, are all highly encouraged.
