

Special Issue

Food Decision Making, Branding, and Sustainable Marketing

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue invites articles that explore consumer decision making and response to interventions for sustainable behavior. We are particularly interested in submissions that make novel contributions to understanding sustainable eating behaviors (or lack thereof), the role of branding in sustainability marketing, and the rapid increase in the consumption of commodities with a short life-cycle. We also invite research examining what type of interventions are most effective at influencing consumer behaviors that can promote sustainability, including interventions from firms and policymakers that are focused at the individual behavior level. We look forward to receiving your best work.
