Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Women is a scientific journal dedicated to addressing the wide range of health issues affecting women by providing high-quality, peer-reviewed content, including clinical studies, case reports, and comprehensive reviews. Our goal is to contribute to the advancement of women's health by publishing reliable and relevant research, informing both healthcare professionals and the broader scientific community.

This journal aims to cover a diverse range of topics related to women's health, such as reproductive health, chronic conditions, mental wellness, and preventive care, thus representing a broad spectrum of perspectives and experiences, ensuring a comprehensive understanding of women's health issues across different demographics and communities.

We invite researchers and healthcare professionals to contribute their studies to Women, especially works which offer new insights or address underrepresented areas of women's health, as the journal is always looking for innovative research capable of enhancing our understanding and improve health outcomes for women.

Thank you for your interest in Women. We look forward to collaborating with experts in the field to further the discussion and knowledge of women's health.

Editor-in-Chief

Dr. Maria Grazia Porpora
